

Acknowledgments

The papers in this volume originated as presentations at the CIRCLE-CCRN Round Table in Edmonton, and have been revised and updated for this publication. The authors' enthusiasm, thoughtfulness, encouragement, and timely co-operation in meeting our tight deadlines for revisions and reviews were greatly appreciated, and made this a highly enjoyable project. Ties of communication were renewed and nurtured as the volume took shape, continually reminding us of what a small world we live, work, and create in.

The many highly detailed editing tasks were shared among a talented team. My personal thanks to Marilyn Bittman, Maya Johnson, Éric Spalding, and Shamina Senaratne for your thoughtfulness, dedication, and attention to detail. Thanks as well to Jan Perrier, who designed the stunning cover for this volume, and James Lowther, who transformed the numerous manuscript files into the final pages within this book. Finally, thank you to the Strategic Research and Analysis Directorate of the Department of Canadian Heritage for the financial support that made this publication possible.

The round table was co-funded by the following components of the Department of Canadian Heritage: the Strategic Research and Analysis Directorate, the Cultural Development Sector, the Arts and Heritage Sector, and the International Relations Directorate. Many people within each of these Canadian Heritage components contributed to the event, either by attending the round table, making presentations, pushing the paper to get the funding through, or making the administrative arrangements. As well, thanks are extended to the District Office of Canadian Heritage in Edmonton for their in-kind support of the event. The Council of Europe provided transportation support for the European participants, which was also greatly appreciated. Last but not least, thank you to Donna Cardinal, who was in charge of the local arrangements for the event.
