COMMUNICATION AND JOURNALISM PROGRAMS IN CANADA

We are presenting here a listing and description of all Communication and Journalism programs in Canada. The descriptions have been provided by chairpersons of each program. In a few cases we did not receive information in time to include it here. If your program was overlooked or if you forgot to send us information, please let us know and we will publish the information in the NOTES section. We hope that present and future students of Communication in Canada will find this section a helpful reference.

BRITISH COLUMBIA

Cariboo College, Kamloops: This two-semester certificate program offers students maximum opportunity to develop skills used in journalism and print production and in program and commercial production in radio and television. Classes, laboratories and production commitments require more than 50 hours of student time per week, much of it spent in realistic working conditions.

These practical aspects of the program become intensive in the last few weeks of the first (Fall) semester and continue through the Winter semester. Courses are taught in Newspaper Journalism, Broadcast Journalism, Communications English, Photography, Newspaper Production, Broadcast Production, and Political Studies.

Contact: G. Alastair Watt, Chairperson, Communications Media, Cariboo College, P. O. Box 3010, Kamloops, British Columbia V2C 5N3

Simon Fraser University: Department of Communication, no information received. Contact: Dr. William Leiss, Head, Department of Communication, Simon Fraser University, Burnaby, British Columbia V5A 1S6
Kwantlen College, Department of Journalism, 5840 Cedarbridge Way, Richmond, British Columbia, no information received.

Langara Campus, Vancouver Community College, 49th and Ontario, Vancouver, British Columbia V5Y 2Z6, no information received.

ALBERTA

University of Calgary, Master of Communications Studies: The Graduate Program in Communications Studies at the University of Calgary is a new programme offering three degrees. The first is a part-time Master of Communications Studies (MCS), the second a full-time Master of Communications Studies, and the third, an M. A. in Communications.

Essentially the Master of Communications Studies is a professional graduate degree offering a broad orientation to applied communications studies. It is designed to acquaint working professionals and people at mid-career level with knowledge and research skills necessary for senior communication management. It examines external and internal communication processes in both the public and private sectors.

Admission requirements for the Master of Communications Studies Programme are two-fold, one being a 3.0 grade point average plus a minimum of three years work experience in a communication related occupation. Currently there are 52 graduate students in the Master of Communications Studies Programme.

The M. A. degree is a research degree where graduate students are required to undertake independent scholarship following a series of graduate courses taken in an interdisciplinary mode culminating in a master's thesis. Some financial assistance may be available to prospective candidates.
The Communications Studies Programme is an interdisciplinary programme which emphasizes communication as a process and draws upon teaching faculty from various disciplines including Law, Political Science, Management, Sociology, Psychology, and Computer Science.

Contact: Dr. Thomas L. McPhail, Director and Professor, Master of Communications Programme, University of Calgary, 2500 University Drive N.W., Calgary, Alberta T2N 1N4

Edmonton: Grant MacEwan Community College, Advertising and Public Relations is a demanding two year diploma program. Instructors from the advertising and public relations field give students access to the latest techniques. Students plan special events and work closely with not for profit groups in developing communication plans. Six weeks of field placement is required. First year enrollment is limited to 65. The program boasts student chapters in the American Advertising Federation and International Association of Business Communicators. The program is also recognized by the Canadian Public Relations Society.

Audiovisual Technician, moving from a one year certificate to a two year diploma program in fall 1985, trains students for education and industrial markets. Emphasis is placed on hands-on assignments using fully-equipped lab and studio facilities. Courses cover multi-image, graphics and audiovisual production. Special projects for local communities prepare students for the workforce, and allows them to build a portfolio. Four weeks of field placements will be required.

Journalism, a two year diploma program, stresses practical assignments. Under faculty guidance students write and pasteup a program newspaper. Complete newsroom and lab facilities simulate the workplace. From reporting, photography and newspaper design to government and the law, courses cover all the basics. The program works closely with local media and the Alberta Weekly Newspapers Association. Six weeks of field placement is required. First year enrollment is limited to 35. And, the program boasts high employment for graduates.

Native Communications, a twelve month certificate program, focuses on print and electronic media for the native community. A six week field placement is required. Dealing with issues of interest to natives, the program works closely with native media organizations. Limited enrollment of 20 permits a high degree of individual attention, small classes and practical assignments and projects.

Contact: Grant MacEwan Community College, Box 1796, Edmonton, Alberta T5J 2P2

Lethbridge Community College, Journalism Program, 5th Avenue and 18th Street South, Lethbridge, Alberta T1K 1L6, no information received.

Southern Alberta Institute of Technology, Journalism Arts, 16th Avenue at 14th Street N.W., Calgary, Alberta T2M 0H4, no information received.

SASKATCHEWAN

University of Regina, Saskatchewan Indian Federated College: Indian Communication Arts, is one department of the Saskatchewan Indian Federated College. Federated with the University of Regina, and controlled by the 69 Indian nations of Saskatchewan the Saskatchewan Indian Federated College stands today as the only Indian-controlled, degree granting institution of higher education in Canada.

Indian Communication Arts was born in 1983 out of the need for Indian journalists and communicators on the reserves and in native communities. From its developmental stage on, Indian Communication Arts has been oriented towards small-scale media, community journalism, and, most importantly, has strived to adapt traditional Western journalistic activities to the actual situation of Indian people hic et nunc. Photojournalism, Reporting, Research, Interviewing, Media Law, Production, etc., are new fields which Indian Communication Arts is breaking since all matters are assessed and taught from a perspective rarely seen before in the field -- the Indian perspective.

In many instances, what is happening in the Department of Indian Communication Arts should be viewed as very similar to what several Third World countries have shaped and named developmental journalism or journalism for development. In this sense, Indian Communication Arts has to be understood as belonging to the overall decolonization process which Indian nations throughout Canada are determined to carry out successfully for themselves.

At the moment Indian Communication Arts offers a two-year certificate fully accredited with the University of Regina. This certificate program, even if revised slightly in its curriculum, will become in full part a four-year advanced B.A. program in Indian Communication Arts by the fall semester of 1986.

A maximum number of twenty students is accepted each fall into Indian Communication Arts.

Vital for the program's development, research has been initiated and carried out in several areas. First, traditional Indian communication and the impact of it on 1984 Indian media development. Second, community-based research describing and analyzing media use, language use, information sources and information needs. Third, analysis of contemporary media hardware and its relevance for development of small-scale media in Indian communities.
Contact: Joel Demay, Head, Department of Indian Communication Arts, Saskatchewan Indian Federated College, 127 College West, University of Regina, Regina, Saskatchewan S4S 0A2 (306-584-8333).

School of Journalism and Communications, University of Regina. No information received. Contact: Head, School of Journalism and Communications, University of Regina, Regina, Saskatchewan S4S 0A2

University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon: Since 1971 classes have been offered in Communication through the Department of Sociology. This is a broad based program in all areas of communication. The introductory course is also offered in an independent study format through Extension. Other courses of interest to the student of communication are to be found in the Psychology Department. Six students have completed a Master's Program in Communication through the Department of Sociology. Research conducted since 1970 has been in the areas of instructional communication, legal communication, audience reactions to various television programs, adult television usage and perceptions, and on video content.

Contact: Dr. E. D. Tate, Department of Sociology, St. Thomas More College, 1437 College Drive, Saskatoon, Saskatchewan S7N 0W6

The Department of Educational Communications is associated with the College of Education at the University of Saskatchewan. The Department offers courses in Educational Communications, media production, and computer assisted learning. A M.A. degree is available through the department.

Contact: Dr. Barry Brown, Department of Educational Communications, College of Education, University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon, Saskatchewan S7N 0WO
MANITOBA

Red River Community College, Journalism Department, 2055 Notre Dame, Winnipeg, Manitoba R3H 0R8, no information received.

ONTARIO

University of Western Ontario: The Graduate School of Journalism at the University of Western Ontario celebrates its 10th anniversary in 1984. The original undergraduate program was started in 1946. It represented, along with the journalism school at Carleton University in Ottawa which commenced about the same time, the beginnings of full-fledged journalism education in Canadian universities, although there had been sporadic attempts in this direction in earlier years. The University of Western Ontario, for instance, started to offer some journalism courses in the 1920’s.

In 1974, the undergraduate program was phased out and the Graduate School came into being. It was and remains the first exclusively graduate school in journalism in Canada, offering an Master of Arts in Journalism.

The Graduate School offers a 12-month program starting in May to a limited group of 40 students. In addition, the faculty also teach undergraduate courses in the history and role of Canadian news media. The graduate program includes both academic and practical elements and covers all media: print, radio, television and videotex. Technical facilities on the premises of the School in Middlesex College offer students access to up-to-date equipment for all media. The School is one of the first in North America to shift completely from typewriters to computer terminals.

The academic curriculum includes courses in journalism history, communications theory, journalism ethics, as well as courses in law and economics designed for journalism students. As part of their academic work all students are required to complete a major media research project.

The Graduate School is also active in the professional development of working journalists. In 1984, a two-week residential course in economics and finance for 20 working journalists was added to the two week law course which has been offered to the working press since 1978.

Research activity by faculty has grown steadily in recent years. Papers have been presented to annual meetings of the Canadian Communication Association and the Association for Education in Journalism and Mass Communication in the United States. In 1984, the Secretary of State announced a grant of $500,000 to the Graduate School to create the first media studies centre attached to a Canadian journalism school.

Contact: Dean Peter Desbarats, Graduate School of Journalism, The University of Western Ontario, Middlesex College, London, Ontario N6A 5B7

Brock University: The Communications Studies Program at Brock is an undergraduate program which offers both a Pass and an Honours B. A. The Program consists of a core of communications courses supplemented by two streams which reflect the dual emphases of this broadly-based field of study, Communications: Social Policy and Communications: Culture and Language.

The Communications: Social Policy stream focuses on the interaction of specific media of communications (the electronic, film and print media and drama) and social and political forces in society. The structures of government, the processes of public policy formulation and issues of media ownership and regulation are studied in conjunction with the political and social functions and impacts of the mass media.
The Communications: Culture and Language stream provides the student with an understanding of the Canadian media with an emphasis on critical analysis as well as the cultural, linguistic and psychological bases of communications.

The Program is presently supported by five co-operating departments, English, Fine Arts, Politics, Psychology and Sociology. The ten faculty directly involved in the Program bring to it a wealth of teaching experience and a remarkable breadth of research interests ranging from popular music, Canadian cinema and theatre, linguistics, literary criticism, the sociological and economic impact of the media through to historic and contemporary analyses of public policy concerning and explicit regulation of the media in Canada and abroad.

The Program, now in its second year, has attracted about 90 students, about 50 of whom are studying Communications as a single or double major.

Contact: W. H. N. Hull, Professor of Politics, Co-ordinator of Communications Studies Program, Brock University, St. Catharines, Ontario L2S 3A1

University of Windsor: Communication Studies at the University of Windsor began in 1969, the first department of its type in Ontario. Fifteen years later, it offers the General B. A., Honours B.A. and the M.A. in Communication Studies, and a Certificate in Organizational Communication. Fourteen full-time professors and several part-time and adjunct instructors present its program to an annual enrollment of about 300 undergraduate majors and 25 graduate students. The Department is an unit of the Faculty of Social Science, and its central concern is information in society: its production, movement, control, effects and analysis.

Faculty members have backgrounds in literature, philosophy and history as well as sociology, psychology, political science, law, education and the media industries, in addition to communication itself. Consequently, the program is broadly based. The Department's 62 undergraduate and 26 graduate courses cover a wide range of communication studies: production processes in broadcasting, film making, press writing, and photography; theoretical and research methodologies in quantitative and qualitative modes and models; media studies in film, video, press, and telecommunications history, criticism, and regulation; organizational and instructional communication systems; and communication in Canadian and international culture and development.

Faculty research has been especially active in investigating Canadian media and Canadian culture; the development of communication policy and the regulation of media in relation to changing technology; the utilization of new communication technologies in the arts, instructional design and career and office management; international media systems; the role of the news media in political campaigns; and emerging issues of communication law. From its unique location on the Detroit River bordering the fifth largest media market in the United States, the Department is able to study US-Canadian cross-cultural media relations with particular effectiveness.

The Department enjoys a high degree of collegiality and creates an informal atmosphere for its students.

Contact: James M. Linton, Head, Department of Communication Studies, University of Windsor, Windsor, Ontario N9B 3P4

Canadore College of Applied Arts and Technology, North Bay, Ontario, has offered a two-year Journalism Program for the past fifteen years. It has added a new two-year program in Broadcast Journalism for the fall of 1984.

Both programs accept 28 students each September. Hands-on experience in the Journalism Program includes the production of a weekly newspaper, and Broadcast Journalism students produce daily radio and television newscasts on the school's cable TV and radio stations. Six-week work placements at newspapers, radio, or TV stations, give students in both programs on-the-job experience.

Canadore's Journalism Program has a fully-equipped modern darkroom and a newsroom with video display terminals and Canadian Press wire service. The Broadcast Journalism Program has a fully-equipped electronic newsroom and complete radio and TV studio facilities. Apart from the jour-alism courses, both programs have courses in political science, psychology, sociology, English, photography, law, shorthand, and typing.

Contact: Don Curry, Journalism Coordinator, Canadore College Applied Arts and Technology, P. 0. Box 5001, North Bay, Ontario P1B 8K9

Carleton University: The School of Journalism at Carleton University offers five programs: a four-year professional program for undergraduates leading to a Bachelor of Journalism degree with Honours; an intensive one-year program leading to the same degree for students who hold a degree in another discipline; a four-year research and theory program for undergraduates leading to a Bachelor of Arts in Mass Communication with Honours; a three year program for undergraduates leading to a Bachelor of Arts in Mass Communication; and a one-year program leading to the Master of Journalism for experienced journalists or for students holding a Bachelor of Journalism degree or its equivalent.

Enrollment is controlled according to the current resources in faculty and equipment, and job opportunities.
The full-time faculty, which currently numbers 23 full-time appointments, has been recruited from the media and the university community. A majority of the faculty were working journalists before coming to Carleton, but a substantial number of these and others hold advanced degrees in the humanities and social sciences.

Application forms can be secured either through the School (for the one-year intensive programs or for the M.J. program) or through the Admissions Office (for the undergraduate journalism and mass communication programs.)

Contact: Stuart Adam, Head, School of Journalism, Carleton University, Ottawa, Ontario K1S 5B6

York University: Program in Mass Communications, no information received.

Ryerson Polytechnical Institute, Department of Journalism, 50 Gould Street, Toronto, Ontario M5B 1E8, no information received.

Cambrian College of Applied Arts, Journalism Department, 1400 Barrydowne Road, Sudbury, Ontario, P3A 3V8, no information received.

Centennial College of Applied Arts, Journalism Department, 651 Warden Avenue, Scarborough, Ontario, no information received.

Conestoga College, Journalism Department, 299 Doon Valley Drive, Kitchener, Ontario N2G 3W5, no information received.

Durham College, Journalism Program, Simcoe Street North, Oshawa, Ontario L1H 7L7, no information received.

Georgian College, Journalism Program, 401 Duckworth Street, Barrie, Ontario L4M 3X9, no information received.

Humber College, Journalism Department, P. O. Box 1900, Rexdale, Ontario M9W 5L7, no information received.
Lambton College, Journalism Department, P. O. Box 969, Sarnia, Ontario, no information received.

Loyalist College, Journalism Program, Belleville, Ontario K8N 5B9, no information received.

Niagara College, Journalism - Print Program, P. O. Box 1005, Woodlawn Road, Welland, Ontario L3B 5S2, no information received.

St. Clair College, Journalism Department, 2000 Talbot Road, Windsor, Ontario N9A 6S4, no information received.

Sheridan College, Journalism Department, 1430 Trafalgar Road, Oakville, Ontario L6H 2L1, no information received.

QUEBEC

Universite du Quebec a Montreal: (UQAM) is only fifteen years old. Its journalism program, which fits within the structure of a B. A. in Communications, has been in existence for eight years. Students register for a bachelor's degree in Communications on a 90 credit basis.

The first year is spent on introduction courses: Introduction to the study of communications phenomenas, Observation of the communicating process, Methods of analysis in communications, History of communications, Economic organizations of the mass media, Technology and mass media, Psychosociology of mass communication, Initiation to audio, Initiation to video, Initiation to photography, Initiation to journalistic writing - a delicate balance of theoretical courses and practical workshops. At the beginning of the second year, the student is expected to choose what we call a profile - or specialty - within the program. His or her choice includes journalism, radio, television and cinema. As about 130 students are accepted each year for the B.A., workshops of approximately 30 students develop for each of the profiles.

The second year is therefore spent literally practicing the trade chosen. In journalism, students take three workshops per semester, four in written journalism, one in radio journalism and one in television journalism. Those workshops permit them to function as journalists for a whole year, under the supervision of professors who are all practitioners of their trade. They are also expected to follow, parallelly, theoretical courses in communications at large or in journalism in particular.

The third year allows them to perfect their knowledge and practice through courses in Investigative Journalism, International Journalism, Journalism and Society, Communication and Culture, Journalistic Administration.... The practical end of the trade is completed through compulsory stages in media newsrooms under university supervision.

About 25 students graduate every year from our program in journalism.

Contact: Jacques Larue-Langlois, Director, Module de Communication, Universite du Quebec a Montreal, Case postale 8888, Succ. A, Montreal, Quebec H3C 3P8

University de Montreal: The Graduate Studies Faculty of the University of Montreal offers a programme of study in communications, leading to an MSc degree. The Master's programme addresses two main objectives: first, the scientific analysis of the forms and contents of the new media and of the transformations they have brought about in interpersonal relations, within organizations, and within society as a whole; and second, the development of a general theory of communication.

Opportunities for study are offered in three main areas of concentration. The media and society area is concerned with the behaviour and other individual and social characteristics linked by the mass media. The symbolic area of concentration involves the study of the forms and meanings of messages, the media by which messages are transmitted, and the interaction between the two. The communications institutions and systems area not only focuses on specialized communications institutions but also looks more generally at the communications components of organizational life in society.

Students must complete a core course component consisting of two required courses in general theory and methods and three electives which provide an introduction to one of the areas of specialization and further training in research methods. Each student also participates in five advanced seminars in an area of specialization, and presents a thesis based on independent research. Students are expected to present the thesis at the end of the second semester of study.

Specialized laboratory and media facilities are available to students in the communications programme.

Contact: Dr. Annie Mear, Directoress, Department of Communication, Universite de Montreal, C. P. 6128 Succ. A, Montreal, Quebec H3C 3J7

Concordia University: B.A. in Communication Studies -- The Department of Communication Studies was founded in 1965 (as Communication Arts), the first at a Canadian University. The Department's programmes are generalist in nature and take a broad approach to the study of media and communication in today's world. Of primary concern is a humanistic understanding, a value-oriented appreciation of the role of the mass media in society. Programmes intend to develop the student's critical judgement and creative potential by both theoretical and practical work.
Each of the Department's programmes has three basic components: 1) a humanities and liberal arts emphasis (Group 1 courses); 2) a social science and research emphasis (Group 2 courses); and 3) a creative laboratory-experience emphasis (Group 3 courses).

Graduates of the Department's programmes have found media-related careers in: 1) Radio, Television, Broadcast Journalism; 2) Film, other media industries, media departments of business; 3) Small media firms and freelance media; 4) Advertising, Public Relations, Promotion, Marketing; 6) Other professions, and government services.

Master of Arts (Media Studies) -- The Department of Communication Studies offers a program leading to the degree of Master of Arts in Media Studies. This program provides for advanced study in the theory and the professional practice of mass media. Department courses are scheduled in the evening and/or on weekends to accommodate work schedules. Students may attend on part-time or full-time basis.

The program offers courses focusing on: i) Media Policy, Responsibility, Management; ii) News, Public Affairs, Documentary Media. Additional courses offer broader study in communication theory, media research methods, media aesthetics.

Contact: Gail Valasakis, Head, Department of Communication Studies, 7141 Sherbrooke Street West, Montreal, Quebec

McGill University, Graduate Program in Communications, no information received.

NOVA SCOTIA

King's College Dalhousie University, Journalism Program, Halifax, Nova Scotia B3H 2A1, no information received.
PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

Holland College, Journalism Department, Charlottetown, P.E.I., no information received.

*****

In addition to the specific programs listed above a survey of university calendars and bulletins indicates that the following universities and departments offer courses of interest to the person concerned with the study of communication.

Nova Scotia: Acadia Divinity College, Wolfville, Nova Scotia B0P 1X0 [Dept. of Christian Ministry: Christian Communications; Dept. of English: Speech Theory and Practice.]

University College of Cape Breton, P. O. Box 5300, Sydney, Nova Scotia. [Dept. of Speech Communications: Degree Program. Mary Lynch, Head. Dept. of Management and Administration: Interpersonal Communication, Marketing Communications, Organizational Relations.]

Mount Saint Vincent University, Halifax, Nova Scotia B3M 2J6. [Dept. of English: Contemporary Culture and Film, Media in the Modern World; Dept. of Linguistics; Dept. of Psychology, Psychology of Language: Listening, Speaking, and Communicating; Dept. of Speech and Drama; Dept. of Home Economics: Communications in Home Economics; Bachelor of Public Relations, seven mass media and journalism courses.]

Dalhousie University, Halifax, Nova Scotia B3H 4H6: [Dept. of Theatre; Dept. of Occupational Therapy: Dyadic and Group Communication; Dept. of Health Education: Interpersonal Communication and Health Communication.]

Newfoundland: Memorial University, St. John's, Newfoundland A1C 5S7. [Dept. of Sociology: Communication and Culture, New Media Methods in Social Research; Dept. of Ed. Communication for Disabled Individuals, Communication for the Deaf, Basic Interpersonal Communication, Oral Communication, Communication Skills and Techniques in a Cross-Cultural Environment, Group and Audience Communication]

Quebec: Universite du Laval, Quebec, Quebec. [Courses offered in journalism, Communication, and Public Relations].

Universite du Quebec, 2875 boulevard Laurier, Sainte-Foy, Quebec G1W 2M6. [Programs in Communications and Psychology of Communication].

Universite du Quebec a Rimouski, 300 avenue des Ursulines, Rimouski, Quebec G5L 4M6. [Communication].

Universite du Quebec a Trois Rivieres, 3351 boulevard des Forges, Trois Rivieres, Quebec G5R 5H7. [Communication].

Vanier College, St. Croix Campus, 821 St. Croix Boulevard, St. Laurent, Montreal, Quebec H4L 3X9. [Dept. of Cinema and Communication].

Ontario: Algonquin College of Applied Arts and Technology, 1385 Woodroffe Avenue, Ottawa, Ontario K2G 1V8. [Dept. of Journalism - Print and Broadcasting].

Arundel College, University of Toronto, Mississauga, Ontario. [Dept. of Phil: Philosophy of Language; Dept. Pol. Science: Public Opinion and Voting; Dept. of Religious Studies: Communications and Religious Consciousness; Dept. of Soc.: Communication Theory and Research, Structure of Interpersonal Relations, Communication and Ethics, Canadian University of Guelph, Guelph, Ontario N1G 2W1. [Dept. of Consumer Studies: Communication and Behaviour, Communication in the Marketplace; Dept. of Drama: Intro. to Film; Dept. of English: Public Speaking; Extension Division: Communications, Communication Process, International Communication, Technology in Extension Education, Agricultural Communications; Dept. of Family Studies: Communication in Family Consultation, Dynamics of Group and Family Functioning; Dept. of Fine Arts: Media of Art History, Media Workshop, Extended Media; Dept. of Landscape Architecture: Graphic Communication; Dept. of Psychology: Approaches to the Study of Social Interaction, Mass Media: Collective Behaviour and Violence; Dept. of Soc.: Group Dynamics].

Laurentian University, Sudbury, Ontario P3E 2C6. [Dept. of Sociology: Interpersonal Communication, Mass Culture and Mass Media; Dept. of Theatre Arts: Theatre Media, Voice Production and Speech].

Ontario Bible College, 25 Ballyconnor Court, Willowdale, Ontario M2M 4B3. [Courses in Audio Visuals, Group Dynamics and Public Speaking].

Université Saint-Paul University, 223 Main, Ottawa, Ontario K1S 1C4. [Institute of Social Communications].

University of Toronto, 315 Bloor Street West, Toronto, Ontario M5S 1A3. [Dept. of Applied Psych.: Group Processes, The Cultural Effects of Mass Media on Human Cognition].

Trent University, Peterborough, Ontario K9J 7B8 [Dept. of Cultural Studies].

University of Western Ontario, London, Ontario N6A 5B6. [Dept. of Psych: Psychology of Language, Human Information Processing, The Psychology of Persuasion; Dept. of Soc:

Manitoba: Brandon University, Brandon, Manitoba R7A 6A9. [According to Bulletin there is a Department of Art and Journalism, however, no specific classes are offered in Communication as these classes are non-departmental.]

University of Manitoba, Winnipeg, Manitoba R3T 2N2. [Dept. of Psych.: Language and Thought; Dept. of Soc.: Interpersonal Communication, Mass Communication; Dept. of Education: Seminar in Media Education; Dept. of Family Studies: Communication Principles and Techniques.]

St. Paul's College, The University of Manitoba, Fort Garry Campus, 430 Dysart Road, Winnipeg, Manitoba R3T 2M6. [Dept. of Linguistics: Language as a Communication System:]

Saskatchewan: Canadian Bible College, 4400 Fourth Avenue, Regina, Saskatchewan S4T 0H8. [Communication courses in all programs along with Speech and Homiletics.]

University of Regina, Regina, Saskatchewan. [School of Journalism and Communications; Film Program; Indian Communication Program.]

Saskatchewan School of Arts, c/o Saskatchewan Arts Board, 200 Lakeshore Drive, Regina, Saskatchewan S4S 0B3. [Creative Writing and Radio Drama.]

University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon, Saskatchewan S7N ONO. [Dept. of Sociology: Small Groups, The Communication Process, Public Opinion and Propaganda, Interviewing; Dept. of Religious Studies: Religion, Mass Media and Popular Culture; Dept. of Educational Communications, College of Education; Dept. of Psych.: Communication and Human Relations; College of Home Economics: Communication in Home Economics.]

120
Economics; College of Nursing: Communication in Nursing; College of Engineering: Communication for Engineers; College of Agriculture: Agriculture Communication.

Athabasca University South, Box 10000, Athabasca, Alberta T0G 2R0. [Dept. of Administrative Studies: Intro. to Interpersonal Communication, Interpersonal Communication in Management, Practice of Interpersonal Communication, Communication and Problem Solving.]

Banff Centre, School of Fine Arts, Banff, Alberta T0L 0C0 [Arts Journalism, Electronic and Film Media courses are offered.]

tion Models in Education.]

Camrose Lutheran College, Camrose, Alberta T4V 2R3. [Dept. of Drama: Intro to Oral Communication, Oral Interpretation.]

Fairview College, Box 3000, Fairview, Alberta T0H 1L0. [Communication I and II in Vocational Skills Training and Business Certificate Programs.]

Lethbridge Community College, Lethbridge, Alberta T1K 1L6. [Dept. of Communication: Print Journalism, Broadcast Journalism, Broadcast Production, Advertising and Public Relations; offered in specialized programs: Communication Skills, Interpersonal Relations and Communication Skills.]

North American Baptist College, 11525 23rd Avenue, Edmonton, Alberta T6J 4T3. [Intro. to Public Speaking, Basic Communications, Small Group Dynamics, Media Seminar.]

British Columbia University of British Columbia, 2075 Westbrook Mall, Vancouver, British Columbia V6T 1W5. [Dept. of Communication Media and Technology: Instructional Television, Communication Theory, Educational Television, Design Of Instructional Systems; Faculty of Arts - specialization in film and television production.]

Camosun College, 1950 Lansdowne Road, Victoria, British Columbia V8P 5J2. [Diploma and Certificate in Communication.]

Emily Carr College of Art and Design, 1399 Johnston Street, Vancouver, British Columbia V6H 3R9. [Courses offered in media communications.]

Open Learning Institutes, Box 940000, Richmond, British Columbia V6Y 2A2. [Courses in Written Communication, Business Communication, Effective Communication, Advertising.]
Simon Fraser University, Burnaby, British Columbia V5A 1S6
[Dept. of Communication gives program at B.A., M.A., and Ph.D. levels; Dept. of Linguistics: Communication and Language.]

University of Victoria, P. O. Box 1700, Victoria, British Columbia V8W 2Y2. [Dept. of Psych.: Foundations in Education: Verbal Communication, Non-verbal Communication, Group Processes; Dept. of Ed. Tech.: Mass Media and Education, Film and Education; Dept. of Soc.: Small Group Dynamics; Dept. of Political Science: Public Opinion and Electoral Behaviour, Mass Media and Politics; Dept. of Theatre: Speech Communication, Speech and Theatre; Dept. of Linguistics: Sociolinguistics; Dept. of Psych.: Interpersonal Communication; Dept. of Communication and Social Foundations: Communication and Social Foundations.]

*****

THE ASSOCIATION OF DIRECTORS OF JOURNALISM PROGRAMS IN CANADIAN UNIVERSITIES

L'ASSOCIATION DES DIRECTEURS ET COORDONNATEURS DES PROGRAMMES DE JOURNALISME DES UNIVERSITÉS CANADIENNES

The Association was created in the spring of 1982 by directors of the 10 university-level journalism programs then operating in Canadian universities. The directors represent journalism programs offered at King's College, Halifax; Concordia University, Montreal; Universite de Montreal; Universite de Quebec, Montreal (UQAM); Universite de Moncton; Universite Laval, Quebec; Ryerson Institute, Toronto; Carleton University, Ottawa; University of Western Ontario, London; and the University of Regina. The Association is an associate member of the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada. Its founding president is Peter Desbarats, Dean Graduate School of Journalism, the University of Western Ontario.
Members of the Association meet every six months to exchange information, and to collaborate on programs to improve journalism education. A series of working papers is being produced to summarize the objectives of Canadian journalism education. Faculty exchanges are being encouraged. Contacts with journalism educators in other countries have been established.

*****

NOTES

The Canadian Communication Association has issued a call for papers to be presented at the next annual session of the Association in Montreal 7, 8, and 9th June. Deadline for abstracts is 15 December 1984, and complete papers must be received by 15 April 1985. Contact Prof. Douglas Baer, Department of Communication Studies, University of Windsor, Windsor, Ontario N9B 3P4, or, Robert Saucier, Service de l'education permanente, Ministere de l'Education, 600, rue Fullum, 4 etage, Montreal, Quebec H2K 4L7.

*****

The Broadcast Education Association History Committee has issued a call for papers to be presented at a convention in Las Vegas, April 1985. Deadline for papers is 15 January 1985. Contact David H. Ostroff, Radio-TV-Film Program, 413 South Hall, Bowling Green State University, Bowling Green, Ohio 43403.

*****

We are proud to announce that the Canadian Journal of Communication has been accepted for inclusion in the Educational Technology Abstracts, Carfax Publishing Co., Hopkinton Office & Research Park, 35 South Street, Hopkinson, Mass. 01748 U.S.A.